Lab 8

Question 1

The server has a function called Bind that will bind to a port. There is also a Listen function that will wait on the client side to start a connection which is another function called connect.

Question 2

The differnce between the UDP implementation is that the data that is sent will be sent regardless if there is any connection, which could lead to a loss of packets but improces the speed.